To Whom It May Concern,

I am pleased to write this recommendation for Khoo Teng Jin, who worked as a Business Analyst Intern under my supervision for six months at AvePoint. During this period, Teng Jin quickly adapted to new challenges and proved himself as a reliable and dedicated team member. His eagerness to learn and positive attitude made a strong impression on his team.

As an intern, Teng Jin handled important tasks, including preparing and conducting workshops to gather requirements, writing meeting minutes, and drafting functional specifications. Despite being new to these responsibilities, he demonstrated a strong ability to learn quickly and deliver quality work under tight deadlines. His willingness to seek clarification and incorporate feedback was commendable, enabling him to continuously improve and perform beyond expectations.

Teng Jin also played an instrumental role in testing the system during its development phase and ensuring that it met client requirements. Furthermore, he confidently presented the system during client demonstrations, showcasing both his technical understanding and his ability to communicate effectively with stakeholders.

One of Teng Jin's strongest qualities is his positive and helpful attitude. He was always ready to support his teammates and contributed to a friendly and collaborative work environment. He built strong relationships with both his colleagues and clients, which speaks to his great interpersonal skills.

Overall, Teng Jin exceeded expectations during his internship. His ability to adapt, learn quickly, and contribute effectively makes him an excellent candidate for any organisation. I am confident he will bring the same enthusiasm and professionalism to his future roles and will be a valuable asset to any team.

Sincerely,
